INDUSTRIAL DISPUTE.

Some 120 workers employed by the Yong Foong Silk Weaving Factory, Lane 319, 33 Kiaochow Road, declared a strike at 12 noon, August 26th, 1940 as a protest against the Management reducing the amount of work on account of business depression.

Four workers' representatives, Wang Yong Fu (王荣富), Sie Yu Ching (謝餘慶), Tsai Hsien Ching (蔡顯卿) and Lee Yuin Sien (李云仙), called in the office of the Industrial Section at 3 p.m. August 26th, 1940 and requested mediation.

Negotiations between Mr. Chen Ti Hwa (陳棣華), for the Management, and the workers' representatives, took place attthe office of the Industrial Section at 10 a.m. August 27th, but no settlement was reached.

Further negotiations between the two parties were held at the factory premises at 11 a.m. August 28th and 29th. After mediation, agreement was finally given to the following terms:-

1. That the Management dismiss 60 workers and pay, as a discharging allowance, $26 to each male and female weaver, and $21 to each male assistant and female worker in the preparatory department.

2. That the remaining 60 workers resume work unconditionally, operating the day shift with treatment as before.

The dismissed workers were paid off on the morning of August 30th, and the remaining half resumed work. The dispute is, therefore, settled.
